SMUGGLED OUT of Europe was this photo of an Italian coastal battery, one of those feverishly strengthened by the shaky Italians while they waited for the Allied sea-borne invasion. The Duce's docile subjects could not help but wonder if such defences would be as feeble as those against air attack, which have left the country almost completely exposed to Allied bombings.

CAPTION with this photo from Lisbon describes the building as a Berlin apartment house, blitzed during an R.A.F. raid. Caption ascribes the swastika flags to the celebration of Hitler's birthday, when the Nazi leader was prominent by an unbroken silence.

IN ANOTHER photo smuggled from Italy, an Italian crew is seen manning a small coastal gun. Chances are this one already has been put out of business by the devastating Allied air raids.

THE JAPS are feeling the weight of Allied might in this battle action shot of a United States destroyer dropping depth charges on a Rising Sun submarine that probably will never again rise to the surface. This occurred during the fighting for Attu.

RUSSIA, GRAVEYARD OF ADOLF'S NAPOLEONIC DREAMS

JUST AROUND the corner are the Germans at whom this Soviet trench mortar crew are firing. This scene is typical of the vast amount of fighting that has gone on at close range in the towns on the Russian front. Stalingrad was the supreme example, but similar conditions have prevailed elsewhere. Houses, factories and office buildings have become fortresses bitterly contested. The result has been a tremendous destruction of cities, as well as villages. The work of reconstruction will be extremely difficult.

ALL IS FAR from quiet around the Don these days as Russians and Germans grapple for position in the summer's approaching decisive conflict. This Soviet sapper crawling forward through the barbed wire frowns as an exploding shell showers him with earth.

IN THE DARKEST days of the German drive into the Caucasus last summer the Russian fleet held the Black sea, the possession of which is a Soviet trump card. Here a small unit fires anti-aircraft guns at German planes overhead in the battle for the Crimea.

A SOVIET SOLDIER is hit and falls as a squad attacks an enemy position on the double. A hand grenade has started a fire in the opposing trenches and an attacker throws another. The automatic of the man behind haystack is a favorite Red weapon.

LIKE A ROOT HOUSE or meat cache in northern Canada is this timbered block house at the edge of a Russian town. Past it rolls a tank just out of the factory, and now on its way to the front.

HERE'S AN ADDITION to the hundreds of thousands of German prisoners of war now in Russian hands. A tank is their escort to the barbed wire and one of the crew covers them with a revolver.

FOUR MEN WITH rapid-firing automatics can put up a formidable defence and it can be safely concluded that the Germans did not get past this Soviet strong point without many casualties. The Russian battle dress, although loose and easy, is quite unlike the Canadian, but the scoop-shaped helmets are American in type.

THE SUBURBS of this Russ city suffered no less than the downtown areas. Here is a glimpse of the devastation in the working class residential districts on the city's edge. In fact, almost all of it was reduced to ruins during the more than five months' siege.

Reconstruction is under way but there is little of the old city that can be built into the new. In many cases the bricks crumbled to powder. The picture shows what a well-dressed Russian wore in the fight. The bed rolls were needed for sleeping in the open.

THIS LENINGRAD avenue evidently has escaped destructive bombing, for it seems as gay as a Parisian boulevard. Those shave-potes are dejected German prisoners led into town in triumph.

THIS GIRL sapper scout has twice won decorations for valor. In this camouflage, she was one of a group that crawled into the German lines and with a shower of grenades silenced a blockhouse.

THE LOSERS at Stalingrad shaved their heads like those at Leningrad. Seemingly the Russians weren't the only pests they had to face. These prisoners are lucky, for hundreds of thousands died.

IN THE RUINS of a factory, the fight goes on. Red army men find the steel girders and the remnants of the walls excellent cover as they advance to dislodge the enemy. Though Russia has plenty of wide open spaces, there has been much fighting in towns.

IN AERIAL COMBAT, this Soviet woman pilot, Valeria Khomyakova, shot down a "J-88" German bomber. She is only one of hundreds of Russia's feminine fliers who have seen action against enemy planes. Lieut. Khomyakova is no air tyro. Prior to service in the Red air force she was an engineer in a Moscow airplane factory and at the same time was well known as instructor in a flying club.

THOUGH THIS is considered a war of movement, it involves plenty of trench warfare, as here in a Soviet city's outskirts.

ALERT CAMERAMAN SNAPS PLANES BLITZING CONVOY

ATTACKING AN AXIS CONVOY off the Dutch coast, a flight of Beaufighters is seen in this remarkable photo of real battle action as they blitz the enemy ships with cannon and torpedoes. While a minesweeper has been attacked by cannon fire by one of the planes, two merchant ships have been torpedoed by other planes. In the meantime, other Beaufighters are shown as they sweep in on attack to further damage and demoralize enemy.

A BEAUFIGHTER, with a torpedo attached beneath its fuselage, is shown preparing for an operational flight with Coastal Command. Besides its "tin fish" the plane is armed with four cannon. Beaufighters have been used with success against enemy ships in North Sea.

JAP SHIP'S DEATH THROES

VIEWS OF CANADA'S SPECIALTY, U-BOAT BOMBING

THIS FINE STUDY of a depth charge exploding is a splendid illustration of the Canadian navy's major weapon against the U-boat. It has been said Canada's navy is at present the world's most important. The Battle of the Atlantic is the day's problem and Canada plays a major part in this conflict.

THERE ARE SEVERAL ways of tossing a depth charge overboard. The one shown here drops them over the stern of the ship, in this case a corvette, or type of U-boat hunter that Canada is now beginning to supplement by the frigate, a larger and deadlier craft. Here two lines of charges are already in place and waiting for a sub.

ANOTHER METHOD of putting depth charges into action is by a firing mortar as shown here. On top of it is placed the barrel or canister which contains the depth charge. It will be detonated at a depth determined by mechanism and will be tossed over by a light explosive in the firing mortar.

Bread each meal!

PEACETIME
ENERGY QUOTA
At least 2 slices

WARTIME
ENERGY QUOTA
At least 3 slices
of bread a meal

IT'S a long step between clerking and arc welding. Your peacetime "desk" job took energy—yes—and two slices of bread a meal were enough.

Your wartime job—or even your old job plus "wartime overtime"—burns up a lot more energy. Two slices of bread a meal are not enough for you today.

You are using up more energy—you need more energy-food. And extra baker's bread is your best and cheapest way to get it.

The delicious, full-flavored baker's loaf that costs so little is packed with energy. No trouble to prepare . . . no waste in peeling, scraping, cutting away. . . no residue for the body to dispose of.

And unlike other carbohydrates—bread provides the lasting kind of energy that really "stands" by you.

A loaf of bread is a loaf of energy. Cut it to fit your job!

Make your wartime energy quota at least one more slice of bread at each meal.

1/4 OF CANADA'S FOOD ENERGY COMES FROM BREAD

BUY WARTIME ENERGY FROM YOUR BAKER

The bread your local baker supplies takes on a new importance in wartime. It is your richest and cheapest source of food-energy. And made with milk, or eaten with milk, it is an important source of protein for building and repairing muscle.

ALL "W.D.'S." ON STATIONS TAKE PLANE FLIGHTS

IT'S PART OF THE ROUTINE for all airwomen posted to stations to take familiarization flights as soon as possible after they arrive on the station, and one each six months after. Sergt. Nora Hickey of Regina has climbed aboard ready for the take-off, while Section Officer Norah Card, Ingersoll (left) and AW1 Angela Mitchell, Kitchener, are waiting for their turns.

THIS W.D., L.A.W. Margaret Mitchell of Maidstone, Sask., chose the trade of "airframe mechanic." She started off cleaning spark plugs when she first went on an air station, and has since done numerous other jobs necessary to keep planes in an airworthy condition.

AW1 CONNIE LYNHAM of North Bay, a parachute rigger, is airing a 'chute to remove the "deadness" from it. Airwomen learn all the intricate details of parachutes from making and packing them to keeping them in condition.

ON STATIONS, many of the W.D.'s work in and around the hangars, some of them in clerical and stenographic capacities, and some on vehicles and planes. But whatever the capacity of their work, they're all trained as fire-fighters and, should the occasion arise, they are able to drop everything, and lend a hand. Here two drivers and a clerk come on the double.

C LIMAXING the success story of the Women's Division in every branch of the R.C.A.F. that they have penetrated, Canadian airwomen are now being admitted into the classroom for trainees learning the secrets of fighter control. Fighter control is recognized as one of the outstanding developments of aerial warfare. The training course lasts one month and is taken after the girls have completed their basic training. Then they are posted to home war units in Canada, where their duties may be in group "ops" rooms, which deal with the disposition of fighter forces; sector "ops" which directs planes into the air; or "filter" rooms where information coming from many sources is boiled down for use in the "ops" room.

MYSTERY CAVES OF GIBRALTAR ARE CATHEDRAL-LIKE

THIS IS NOT that Utopia, "the Big Rock-candy Mountain," which these awe-inspired soldiers are examining in silent wonderment. This specimen of nature's subterranean architecture is what British engineers discovered during tunnelling operations at Gibraltar. This is a lofty vaulted passage-way leading to a mysterious underground lake with cold, inky-black water.

A MAN ON A RAFT and another on an outcropping of stalagmite examine the cathedral-like beauty of the "salt" formations in another of the series of five cave chambers discovered. What looks like a highly polished floor is a lake with 70,000 gallons of water.

LIKE GIANT MUSHROOMS, clustered one on top of the other, is this unique formation of calcite found on the towering walls of one of the gigantic subterranean chambers. These vast, dank and mysterious underground chambers, which are here illuminated by electricity, seemed to the discoverers like the abandoned dwelling of some fabulous prehistoric giants.

Getting the most nutrition out of fresh fruits and vegetables

The fresh fruits and vegetables you buy at your store or grow in your Victory Garden are going to be more important than ever this summer. They are all "protective" foods—but differ widely in health values.

Together they must supply all your vitamin C and much of your vitamins A and B and minerals. Thus you should be sure to eat something from each of these groups every day!

1 These are the green and yellow vegetables and fruits that best provide vitamin A. First choices: carrots, spinach, peas, beans, squash, sweet potatoes, turnip greens, yellow corn. Alternates: asparagus, green asparagus, broccoli, Brussels sprouts, cantaloupes, chard, kale, oranges, peppers, pumpkin, rutabaga.

2 These are the fruits and vegetables that, in varying quantity, provide vitamin C. First choices: oranges, lemons, grapefruit, tomatoes, raw cabbage. Alternates: melons, peppers, raw salad greens, rhubarb. Note how short the list is compared to the other groups. Oranges are recognized as the richest, most practical source of vitamin C.

3 These foods (some raw and some cooked) provide a variety of other health essentials. First choices: white potatoes, turnips, parsnips, beets, grapes, peaches, raw apples. Alternates: onions, cauliflower, celery, white corn, radishes, cucumbers, kohlrabi, eggplant, salami (oysterplant), avocado, berries, cherries, nectarines, pears, persimmons, plums.

ADEQUATE 17%
DEFICIENT 83%

Only 17% of all Canadians get enough fruit to satisfy minimum health requirements, according to a recent Gallup poll made by the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion. Remember: food experts say you should have one serving of citrus fruit every day. For instance, oranges are your best every-day source of vitamin C—needed daily, because the body does not store it.

You have to plan to get enough C. Fortunately, your breakfast glass of orange juice (6-oz.) gives you your day's full requirement, as well as useful amounts of vitamins A and B and calcium. This start for the day is a big help in maintaining family health in these difficult times.

To supply Allied armed forces with juice and concentrates, Sunkist plants are working round the clock. Thus, while orange production has been greatly increased in recent years, the demands upon it are unusually heavy. New trees take years to yield a crop.

You can help make oranges go further. Use a coarse sieve for juice and mash the pulp through. Keep fruit in a cool, well-aired place. You can buy Sunkist oranges for at least a week's needs. They are "good keepers"—the finest from 14,500 cooperative growers. First for Juice—and Every use!

TIRES MADE WITH SYNTHETIC RUBBER MORE THAN TWO YEARS

"In 1940 they sold thousands of Silverstons made with more than half their rubber synthetic," said the Grand Union maintenance man. In fact, he's pointing to one of those tires, bought by his company to help get this continent's synthetic rubber program started. Grand Union reports excellent results from these tires. Thus synthetic passed its first great test.

The Army will ride on synthetic rubber. Today, B. F. Goodrich is making tires for combat vehicles with synthetic, fuel tanks and fuel lines, too. Already we are overcoming Germany's 30-year head start in synthetic rubber. But there still isn't enough for you. The Army and Navy need all the rubber they can get.

MARK AFRICAN VICTORY

AS A CROWD gathers to catch a glimpse of their sovereigns, the King and Queen, accompanied by their daughters, Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, and the Duchess of Kent, are seen here entering St. Paul's cathedral to attend the national thanksgiving service for the victory in North Africa.

FOLLOWING THE LORD MAYOR of London, who wears ceremonial robes and carries the city sword, the royal party leaves the cathedral. The sword is set in pearls and has a gold hilt. It was presented to the city of London by Queen Elizabeth in 1570 at the opening of the royal exchange.

MEMBERS OF THE R.A.F. took over guard duty at Buckingham Palace recently when the Royal Air Force celebrated its 25th birthday. On this occasion the King and Queen visited the R.A.F. regiment. Here they stop to talk with the regiment commander and officers in the forecourt of the palace.

THERE'S NOTHING downhearted about this woman who, with a smile, carries a bundle of her belongings from the ruins of her home in an English coastal town. She realizes that the Nazis are paying for it many times over, with the destruction of such vital objects as the Mohne dam, factories and such like.

GERMANY, though suffering appalling destruction from the blockbusters dropped by British, Canadian and American planes, still occasionally finds strength for counter-attacks which have caused a good deal of damage to coastal towns in England. A price has still to be paid for victory in the air war in which Germany is now a tremendous loser. Here a body is being carried from ruins by stretcher-bearers. These bomb-wrecked homes are in a London residential suburb, far from military objectives.

WARTIME SAGAS OF THE SEAS

AS THE SCUTTLED Nazi blockade runner Silaplana sinks lower and lower, the crew of H.M.S. Adventure looks on. With a valuable cargo of rubber and tin on board when his ship was stopped by the British cruiser, Silaplana's captain gave orders to scuttle rather than have his ship captured.

THE ENTIRE CREW of the Silaplana, including 100 German navy personnel, was picked up by H.M.S. Adventure. Within a few minutes of receiving the order to stop, Silaplana's crew had abandoned ship. Then there was a series of internal explosions, the death knell of the merchantman.

THESE SURVIVORS of a transport that was the victim of a German torpedo were on their way to a North African port in company with an American troopship convoy when their ship went down. Here they wave to a British plane that spotted them as it circled low. Shortly after a destroyer appeared in the distance and came to the rescue of the seventeen life-boats.

H.M.C.S. IROQUOIS, a powerful and sleek new Canadian destroyer, makes her way speedily to a British port.

"What do you mean by brining my child?"

1. Peter had spent a week at my sister Lucy's while I was away, and I was looking forward to a nice welcome when I arrived. But when I saw her standing there with a lollipop in one hand and a tablespoon in the other, trying to bribe Peter to take his laxative, I was really shocked.

2. "But what else could I do?" asked Lucy resignedly. "Peter needed a laxative, and he just refused to take the one I always use, because he didn't like the taste! How do you ever get him to take a laxative?"

3. "I certainly don't bribe him," I answered. "I never need to! Instead of putting up a fuss when I give him a laxative, he reaches for the bottle and wants more! I always give him Castoria—and he loves it!"

4. "Don't you know it's wrong to give a child the same laxative you use yourself? It might be too strong and upsetting. The doctor says Castoria is made especially for children—so it's safe and gentle, never harsh."

5. We went right across the street to the druggist's, and, I must say, Lucy was impressed when he, too, praised Castoria. "I always recommend it, not only for infants, but for children up to 10 years old," he said.

6. I bought the money-saving Family Size bottle and gave some to Peter when we got back. When Lucy saw him enjoy it, she was convinced. "May I keep that bottle here?" she asked. "From now on—no more bribing!"

As the medical profession knows, the chief ingredient in Castoria—senna—has an excellent reputation in medical literature.

Research has proved that senna works mostly in the lower bowel, so it rarely disturbs the appetite or digestion. In regulated doses senna produces easy elimination and almost never gripes or irritates.

ALLIES REBUILD BIZERTE TO USE AS OFFENSIVE BASE

THIS PUSSY CAT calmly strolls through Bizerte's ruins, with at least some of her nine lives apparently still intact. If she could speak, she probably could tell some weird stories about enemy occupation methods. A spokesman for puss was able to say this much, in a special communique: That she feels as did most of the natives when the Allies arrived, "mighty pleased about the whole thing."

IT WAS TOO HOT for the Axis to handle this gun, as they fled Bizerte. This 105 mm. gun was captured by U.S. troops, two of which are seen here examining the muzzle, burst by a powder charge set by the Nazis themselves.

THIER RIFLES temporarily unnecessary, these Allied engineers in Bizerte have armed themselves with shovels instead. They're going ahead with the job of clearing rubble from the streets of the Tunisian city, which was heavily bombed during the occupation by the enemy. When Allied troops first marched into the city, French civilians met them with flowers and kisses, even though sporadic fighting continued in the streets.

"LUXURIES" LIKE ORANGES FOR MEN WHO BOMB BERLIN

BACK FROM BERLIN after deluging it with block busters, members of an Australian squadron board a truck to return to their living quarters. Amongst them are Canadians. RIGHT, air crew and pilots put on their outfits.

AFTER THEIR RAID, a bomber squadron crew gives a W.A.A.F. section officer an official account of their experiences, the targets they hit, the resistance they met, their casualties.

ORANGES ARE scarce in the British Isles but these are oranges for the boys who bomb Germany. Before taking off on a raid they are checking up on their important iron rations.

10 "BANGS" A SECOND FIRED IN TUNISIA

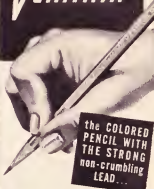

OVERTAKEN by the advancing Allies, one of a German panzer crew gives himself up. As the Allies swept across Africa, one traffic control point along the route checked 260,000 military vehicles that passed through during the last five months of the campaign. One small port, unimportant in peacetime, handled in a few months 330 ships bringing in more than 1,000,000 tons of stores.

AFTER KNOCKING off this German driver, British Tommies stop to examine his tank. The front lines used up a terrific amount of ammunition. There was an average of almost 10 "bangs" every second from the Allied lines during the 46-day period ending May 6, from pistol shots to exploding block busters. During that period 38,000,000 rounds of small arms ammunition were expended.

DURING THE SUCCESSFUL counter-attack against the Axis in Tunisia made by the United States forces, these American soldiers completed the job on this enemy transport by attending to the driver.

THIS IS THE WAY these Highlanders let their tardy cook know how hungry they are. The cook made the mistake of being two seconds late, and so up he went. But the cook, judging by his expression, seems to enjoy the punishment.

THIS American soldier found it easy to make friends with an Arab he met on a desert highway. He simply offered him a cigarette.

DEATH AND DESTRUCTION IN TUNISIA

MEN BEHIND THE VICTORY in Africa, these Allied war chiefs met recently in captured Tunis. From left to right they are: Air Vice-Marshal Broadhurst, A.O.C., western desert; Air Marshal Coningham, A.O.C., tactical air force, Mediterranean; General Montgomery; General Alexander; Air Chief Marshal Tedder, A.O.C.-in-Chief, Mediterranean, and Brigadier-General Kuter, U.S. Army Air Force.

MOPPING UP the remnants of Rommel's forces as Tunisia fell to the Allies, these British infantrymen advance under a protective artillery barrage. To help bring about the successful campaign in North Africa, seventy locomotives and over 700 freight cars were imported from the United States.

WHILE ALLIED FORCES were sweeping the enemy out of Tunisia, the crew of this United States anti-aircraft gun maintained a vigil for vagrant German planes from a foxhole emplacement in Bizerte. In the background, the hulk of a sunken enemy ship is shown resting on the bottom of the harbor.

THIS PICTURE was taken after the Axis was defeated in North Africa and only Rommel's remnants remained to be mopped up. These two German fugitives from the Allies were brought in on the jeep.

GIVING the enemy their own back are these two British Tommies who captured this German gun and are seen turning it against the Nazis.

THIS OUTDOOR conference was held by Gen. Anderson, Gen. Alexander and Air Marshal Coningham as the Tunisian fighting ended.

ANTI-AXIS TOOLS FROM B.C.'S FORESTS

STANDING on springboards, Ollie Brockbos, a Finn, and Jack Crosse, a French-Canadian, are shown above as they notch a tree. Timber is probably the most important contribution B.C. makes to the war effort.

TOPPING A TREE is one of the most dangerous jobs of all. When the top goes, the tree sways violently back and forth with the high rigger hanging on like cowboy on a broncho.

HERE, boom men are seen poling spruce logs to make up a Davis raft. When the raft is completed, it will be towed to a sawmill on the coast. Calked boots are practically compulsory in every logging operation.

MEASURING nine feet across the butt, this giant of the forest will probably be soon on its way overseas to do its bit for the war effort. Approximately 200 million feet of lumber is shipped to Britain monthly.

B RITAIN isn't fighting this war with steel bullets alone. In a figurative sense, she is using wooden bullets, more than 90 per cent. of which come from Canadian forests. Modern warfare and the destructiveness of air raids have given lumber on important part to play and it is doing its job effectively. Most of the lumber imported by Britain now comes from forests in British Columbia, since bottling up of Scandinavian timberlands cut Britain off from that source of supply. Billions of board feet of lumber, valued at millions of dollars, are shipped overseas each year now. In wartime, lumber is used for widely varied purposes, such as airplanes boxes, evacuation camps, bomb shelters, munitions dumps, shipyards and airplanes, to mention a few. Logging operations appearing on this page are of B.C. lumberjacks cutting spruce, which is used a great deal in the construction of airplanes.

TWO HIGH RIGGERS are shown above as they climb a spruce tree with full equipment. A heavy rope looped around the tree and their waists affords a measure of safety, while the climbing irons attached to their boots help them to climb to the top rapidly.

LATE SHOTS FROM TUNISIAN FRONT

HERE'S A LOOK at the much talked about "bazooka," first introduced by United States forces in the battle of Tunisia. It is said to fire a rocket with devastating effect on enemy tanks and pillboxes. Two men can carry the weapon even while running at a fast pace.

THE VICTORY PARADE in Tunis brought together Generals Eisenhower and Giraud to lead the procession through the city's streets. Here they inspect a French guard of honor.

THIS ITALIAN soldier sailed from Tunisia on an inner-tube, heading for Pantelleria, after the enemy collapsed. But he was picked up by an Allied ship off the African coast.
